18 Must-See Gallery Shows in New York This September

Summer's almost over, and the New York art world returns with a vengeance early next month. To whet your appetite, we present a necessarily incomplete list of a few of the exhibitions we're most excited about as the fall kicks off — from porn-inflected conceptualism to Satanic ceramics.

Adam Helms at Boesky East (20 Clinton Street)

September 7-October 5

This New York artist's career has taken some interesting detours over the years, from early scenes of enigmatic militiamen to lightbox works incorporating found imagery, paintings of deconstructed football team logos, and silkscreen or charcoal portraits of women, or terrorists. He inaugurates Boesky's brand new L.E.S. space with gouache drawings (and one laser etching on paper), many of them based on film stills.
